World War 2 was a time of catastrophic events. While America struggled against

Nazi Germany, Japan was expanding its territory with ease. In Europe, the war lingered on with no clear outcome. A battered USSR faced the Red Army, while the allies did all they could to reverse the tide of this new great power. Waterloo, Berlin and Ostend fell, but the war dragged on and on. In North Africa, Allied forces fought to win this uncertain campaign, while their Italian allies faced a dangerous German counter-attack. In the Western Desert, the British side won over the Germans and secured a foothold in the region. But how long would it be until the Germans were back? In the Pacific, the Japanese forces clashed on the small island of Guadalcanal and in New Guinea. As the Japanese destroyed more of their country's economy, the war dragged on and on. The Allied strategy was solid and the enemies were on the run. Allied losses were high, but their cause was just. The Japanese were confident, and pushed on. They were making progress on many fronts, but their advantage was a thing of the past. They were caught in a war they couldn't win, slowly but steadily growing weaker. The war dragged on for years with no clear end in sight. In the end, three more years of horror were to come. Terrible news came from Europe. The Allies were being pushed back and their numbers were quickly diminishing. In North Africa, the British and American forces met head to head. While the British stood firm and pushed the Germans back, the Americans began to withdraw and turn eastward, looking for new trouble to face. The Japanese were in full control of the eastern Pacific and appeared unstoppable, while their allies in the south were caught and surrounded. In 1941, the allies were in trouble. The Nazis were striking at them from three different directions and they were being slowly pushed back. The British and the Americans fought fiercely to the end, but it was to no avail. In the Pacific, the Japanese simply pushed their way through. Their allies faced complete disaster. 1942 turned out to be a crucial year for the fight. The allies were recovering in the European Theatre, but the Japanese still controlled the Pacific. Germany had occupied a large portion of the Soviet Union, while the Germans continued to push back the allies in the Mediterranean. Italy continued to fight for its colonies in North Africa. The allies were losing in the c9d1549cdd

Lovely bride-to-be Claire The first police interview in a BBC2 series about violent crime in East London. 'He put his hands around my throat and said: "If you don't do as I say, you are going to die tonight." ' It was a dare or a threat, but to her then it seemed like an ultimatum. Time: 8.35pm Scene: Enfield Farmers market Location: The Oriels Arms, N22 6BX Claire Wainwright was standing in the queue with a table of other people for fish and chips, just off Bowers Road. At the entrance to the bar was a nasty-looking bouncer. He decided that Claire and her friend needed help, and insisted that they join him in the big room. He took her aside and told her to leave the food. She explained that they were waiting to have a meal in the canteen and he warned her that she would not be allowed to eat in there. "He put his hands around my throat and said: "If you don't do as I say, you are going to die tonight." I was in absolute panic. It's one thing to have a casual conversation and another to have your life threatened... "He had his hands around my throat. I don't like being threatened, but I didn't want him to strangle me... At the time I was probably very naïve, but looking back it was potentially dangerous." Bouncer: You are under arrest. You are going to rot for this for the rest of your life Claire:... No, leave me alone Bouncer: Not possible, I've got a problem with this. You are under arrest. Claire: No, you are an asshole Bouncer: Get down there. In the car. Drive out of here. Get the police Claire: Run? Alleged offender: Don't make me hurt you, it's your only chance. Unidentified bouncer: (On phone) A male has been detained at this premises, he is being arrested. Alleged offender: Go to the station with the girl Claire: No, you are an asshole. Get out of the way. Give me a chance to get out of this place and I won't make a fuss about it. Al
